

SJSU's Institute for Metropolitan Studies Presents

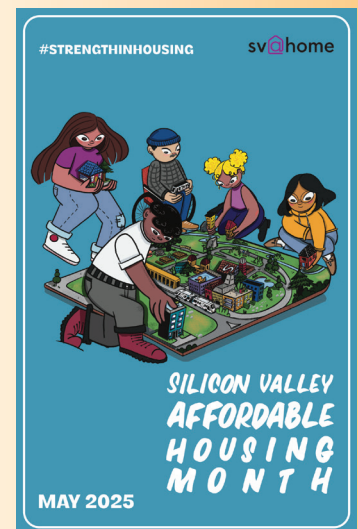

Social Housing in America with Stanley Chang & Natalie Foster

The idea of "social housing" has attained real attention in the United States in recent years as activists, legislators and policy thought leaders join the call for rethinking the role of government in American housing development. SJSU's Institute for Metropolitan Studies is pleased to present a discussion of social housing with two leading voices in the movement, Hawaii State Senator Stanley Chang and author and President of the Economic Security Project Natalie Foster. Join us for an exploration of policy approaches, the implications of social housing for the Bay Area and beyond, and what it will take to make it happen.

Hosted by IMS Fellow Dr. Alex Schafran.
